

Jeremy Richards

Director of Research & Enterprise

University College Falmouth

Jeremy Richards joined University College Falmouth in 2002 and oversees the business support and applied research activities.

Jeremy has over 20 years experience of product and business development, working at the interface between academia and industry. His early career focussed on the development of civil applications from military technology including a senior role at the ground-breaking Defence Technology Intellectual Property Agency.

Following business development roles at Rolls Royce and the Biotechnology & Biological Science Research, Jeremy joined the GEC Management College where he developed the highly-acclaimed GEC Corporate MBA programme.

Jeremy has a degree in Physics and gained a PhD for his research in computer materials.